PASTIME PRESENTING INTERESTING PICTURE

"Her American Prince" in Five Acts, With Ormi Hawley and All-Star Cast.

"Her American Prince," is from the pen of Carl Herbert, having been adapted for the screen from the novel and play of the same name.

Miss Hawley is seen in the role of the princess who falls in love with a young American physician (Bradley Barker), while he is on a tour of the continent. His likeness to the prince consort is of such a striking nature that everywhere he is mistaken for the heir apparent, a situation which brings him no end of unusual adventures.

Mr. Barker essays a dual role, appearing as the prince and later as the young physician. His work in this production stamps him as a versatile actor who rises to every emergency with a vigor that is sure to win him much praise.

Those who delighted in the "Prisoner of Zenda" tales will find a refreshing charm in this unusually interesting story of love and adventure. All the atmosphere of a novel is found in this screen presentation which should appeal to everybody who has appreciation for any thing romantic and exciting.

For the production of "The Spell of the Yukon," the new Metro five act feature picture, based upon the poem of the same name by Robert W. Service and produced by Popular Plays and Players under the direction of Burton King, an entire Alaskan village was built and set up in the snowy wastes of Northern Canada. The work was done under the supervision of Jacques Suzanne, owner and trainer of the dogteams used in this splendid representation of life in the regions under the pole. Suzanne, three-fourths of whose life has been spent in the open, knows the life of the northern wilderness as perhaps no other man in America knows it.

door life showy, in the typical Alaskan scenes called for in the story, and Suzanne pays him the compliment of saying he is the best amateur handler of a dog team ever seen south of Nome. The life of the gaming and dance halls, with taro and roulette in full operation, the dinky little cabins of the "sourdoughs" with their bunks against the walls in Pullman fashion, all are shown in "The Spell of the Yukon," making it a picture of vivid, realistic interest, as well as a gripping story of human loves and hates. "The Spell of the Yukon" will be shown at the Alta theater on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Circumstantial Evidence.

Do you believe that a man should be convicted of a crime on circumstantial evidence? Whether you do or not it will pay you to see "The Man from Nowhere," with the inimitable King Baggot in the leading role. He takes the part of James Hemon, who has threatened to kill his sister if she does wrong. This unwise threat is overheard and when his sister is found dead he is speedily connected with the murder. How he is finally proven innocent is shown in this wonderful Red Feather production through which is woven a charming love theme.

Mr. Baggot is ably supported by Irene Hunt, Helen Morten, Joseph Girard and others equally well known. This feature will be at the Cosy on Tuesday and Wednesday.

towed on the heels of another, in the succeeding years.

Thompson's first picture was the tremendous Triangle-Ince success, "The Man from Nowhere," in which he achieved new laurels by his mastery characterization of the sour old Scotch uncle of the star. Speaking of that first experience, and of the fine activities as they have since been revealed to him, Thompson said, a few days ago:

"I found in 'Peggy,' to my astonishment, that at I had to do in moving pictures was to do as I was told. I never had a single retake. I caught the trick of listening to my director, and never looking at him, and that was all that was necessary."

"Mr. Ince is nothing less than a whirlwind when he is settled down to action. Sometimes when I wasn't him at work, it is hard for me to realize that he is the young chap who played my son in 'Father and Son' only seven years ago."

The part assigned to Thompson in "The Dividend" is one which gives him every opportunity to display his talents for striking characterization. The role of John Steele is that of a grinding, heartless despot of the industrial world, whose greed and aversion have so crushed his finer feelings that wife and son successively sink into despair and death through his neglect and cruelty.
